Peace News
November 4, 2022

Friends,

Alas, I have given into reality.

As I happily harvested my first greens of the season last Spring and dug into my newly acquired Canadian written manual "The Year-Round Vegetable Gardener: How to Grow Your Own Food 365 Days a Year No Matter Where You Live" I wondered aloud to myself and the boys whether I had purchased my last store-bought lettuce. I always manage to avoid buying lettuce and spinach through the summer... but with my soon to be knowledge, could I have purchased my last store-bought lettuce EVER!?!?!? It became a challenge to myself.

I have done much pondering, and have even taken the first steps towards creating a bed that could take a cold frame. But with said cold well and truly on the horizon and no established young plants to inhabit what I hope will be a late-season/winter bed, I have to admit that THAT is a project for another year. With the last of my kale and chard "soupified" last week, and not even any microgreens/sprouts on the go, I realized last Friday that unless I caved it was going to be a long winter of cooked vegetables, sprouts and pea shoots with nary a lettuce leaf or spinach frond to be seen. That would not do. Not do at all. And so I shelved my dream of total greens self-sufficiency and, for the first time since the spring, I bought a box of greens.

Hope you're having a great week! Jennifer

Coats for Kids

The cooler weather we have had may be making you go to the closet and find a warmer coat to wear. If they are clean and gently used, we will gladly accept these items for our annual Coats for Kids collection and donate them to Operation Sharing in Woodstock. They don't have to be just for kids as any size items, kids to adults, are accepted. There will be a bin in the entrance for these items till the end of November.
